

CEC supports the rights of its members and others to the fair use, for educational purposes, of CEC copyrighted materials as defined by U.S. Copyright Law. However, copyrighted materials are a significant valued-added resource for CEC. As such, CEC has the responsibility to its authors, members, and Board of Directors to protect such property, and will enforce its rights. Any use in any format beyond that specified in the fair use guidelines of the U.S. Copyright Law, must have explicit written permission or licensing from CEC. All permission requests for use of CEC content must be submitted and accepted prior to use.

For permission requests requiring special consideration (i.e., translations, derivatives, custom versions, extended rights, etc.) please submit each request on a separate Request for Permission to use CEC Copyrighted Material form with a brief description on how the material will be used as a derivative, custom version, etc. to permissions@ced.sped.org or by fax at 703-620-2521, Attention: Permission Department.

Please use www.copyright.com to obtain routine permission to use CEC copyrighted material. Tables 1 and 2 provide summary information for these routine uses.

LIMITATIONS

1. CEC Permissions are limited to the specifically stated edition, translation, or revision. CEC does not approve "blanket" permissions.
2. CEC will consider approving use of material in altered format when each altered portion is footnoted with the statement that the material is not a direct quotation, and CEC is identified as the source. In addition, the requestor must supply CEC with a copy of the material, as it will appear in the publication.
3. CEC negotiates individual fees for requests to translate and use CEC materials. Contact permissions@cec.sped.org or 703 264-9417.
4. Permission to reprint material from CEC Division journals and materials should be made with the respective Division. Contact the respective Division journal editor. Click here for links to CEC Division Websites.
